Is CharIVN the skriptkiddie?

Contact Us

Based on this bio, I was in the industry when this kid was still in nappies. I see years of experience have taught him well. He absolutely knows that using the simple techniques that have worked for years are not good enough. It makes sense that you need more code to do the job than standard HTML offers. You need to use CSS layers and more to make a website do its job.

We all know that bandwidth is a problem in South Africa and that less than 30% of internet users in this country have broadband access, but we need to make the code heavier in order to make our sites look great.

Son, I was having sex before you were born, I was fixing computers when you were still in nappies. Just because I chose the simplest method of presenting the info does not make me stupid. Do you even know what DOS looked like?

Testimonials

I am famous.

This reminds me of the story of the 2 bulls standing at the fence. An older one and a younger one. The younger one says to the older one, lets run down and make love to one of those cows in the meadow. The older one says no lets walk down and make love to them all.

I took the plunge and bought one of Guy's R274 sites mainly to tinker on the web, without destorying my business site. Besides, at that price, what have I got to lose. Setting up a website will always have teething problems, but the quality of information that is supplied to assist you along the way is excellent. I have bombarded Guy and Melanie with a number of queries/cries for assistance via e-mail and have always received an unexpectedly prompt reply (particularly outside office hours!) The turoirals on generating more traffic to your site, will no doubt not only benefit my R274 site, but also my businesses website as a result. Please feel free to visit my site www.quaser.co.za but bear in mind that it is currently "work in progress" as I work through Guy's tutorials.

I've been in regular contact with Guy over the past couple of weeks, as we are/were doing work for one another. Guy is honest and straightforward and does not make false promises. In business, that is rare and extremely valuable. I'm very glad I've met him.
